

HOW TO CARE?

Care Area Preparation:

Provide enough space for your pigs. The right size of the rearing area depends on the amount of pigs you want to raise.

Make sure the area has adequate protection from the elements such as sun, rain, and wind.

Remove things that could be a danger to pigs such as sharp objects, chemicals, or poisonous plants.

Choosing the Right Pig Type:

Choose a type of pig that suits your purpose. For example, if you want to raise them for pork, choose a breed with good growth and the right amount of fat.

Know the right amount of pigs you want to raise and make sure you have enough space for them to grow.

Providing Adequate Food and Water:

Make sure your pigs always have enough food and water. These are important for their health and growth.

Try commercial feeds that have the right nutrients that pigs need, or you can also provide natural foods such as vegetables, corn, etc.

Bath Preparation and Care:

Give your pigs space to bathe in a clean area. You can build a special bath for them.

Make sure there is clean water for their bathing and keep their bathing area clean and tidy.

Regular Cleaning and Replacement of Equipment:

Keep their nursing area clean and tidy.

Change their bedding (such as straw or lung) at regular intervals to prevent diseases and inflammation.

Regular Observation and Care:

Take enough time to look after your pigs and make sure they are in good condition.

Treat them with love and care to maintain their health and productivity.

Proper pig rearing requires patience and dedication. It is also important that you have knowledge of their care and be prepared for any challenges that may come with raising pigs.

Should do:

Regular Feed:

Make sure your pigs have enough and balanced food. It should contain the right nutrients for their health and growth.

Regular Water Supply:

Always have an adequate supply of clean water for your pigs. Staying hydrated is important for their health.

Clean Environment:

Keep their nursing area clean and tidy. Remove dirt and debris from their grooming area to prevent disease and inflammation.

Regular Health Checkup:

Check the condition of your pigs regularly. Observe their food, behavior, and posture to spot any symptoms of illness immediately.

Providing Space and Exercise:

Provide enough space for your pigs so they have room to move and exercise. This will help their comfort and health.

Implementation of Biosecurity Measures:

Follow biosecurity measures to prevent disease from entering your garden. This may include avoiding contact with other pigs from other areas, cleaning equipment, and providing disinfection to visitors.

When raising pigs, here are some dos and don'ts:

Should do:

Regular Feed:

Make sure your pigs have enough and balanced food. It should contain the right nutrients for their health and growth.

Regular Water Supply:

Always have an adequate supply of clean water for your pigs. Staying hydrated is important for their health.

Clean Environment:

Keep their nursing area clean and tidy. Remove dirt and debris from their grooming area to prevent disease and inflammation.

Regular Health Checkup:

Check the condition of your pigs regularly. Observe their food, behavior, and posture to spot any symptoms of illness immediately.

Providing Space and Exercise:

Provide enough space for your pigs so they have room to move and exercise. This will help their comfort and health.

Don'ts:

Disaster or Emergency Preparedness:

Don't be unprepared for disasters like hurricanes, fires, or disease. Have a plan for responding to any emergency situations.

Health Negligence:

Do not ignore your pigs' symptoms of illness. Consult a veterinarian immediately if you have concerns about the health of your animals.

Giving Excess Food:

Do not overfeed your pigs. Eating too much can cause problems with their health such as excess weight or stomach pain.

Paging